1. a) Divorce was unknown concept in the Hindu marriage. It was a sacrament. According to Manu the concept of divorce was not there, it was believed that the bond of husband and wife is unbreakable and it was sacred.

According to Mitakshara a husband & wife could only separate by the mutual consent not by any other means.

But after the legislation and introduction of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 many grounds were given for divorce. Those are:

1) Adultery (Section 13(1)):

Adultery means when a person has ~~the~~ sex voluntarily with other rather than his/her spouse. The spouse can claim for divorce even if it happens once.

Case:

Swapna Gore V. Sadananda Gore.

Here the wife found that the husband was coming home late and there was a change in his behavior. The court granted the decree of divorce stating sometimes it is difficult to produce accurate evidence & circumstantial evidences shall be considered.

ii) Cruelty:

Cruelty is also one of the grounds for divorce under Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. Cruelty shall be both physical or mental. The spouse may feel danger to his/her life.

Here in cruelty the mens rea of the abuser is not taken into consideration.

There are few points to consider here:

1. There should be constant abuse.
2. There should be threat to their life.
- 3.

iii) Desertion:

Desertion is when ~~the~~ one of the spouses leaves the matrimonial relationship and obligation with an intention to not continue the marriage and not live with the spouse. It is considered desertion only after a year of the spouse moving out.

In Bipin Chandra V. Prabavati,

The husband went to England because of work, meantime the wife and the friend of the husband shared letters, the father of the husband finds those letters and when asked about it the wife refuses to say anything and leaves the matrimonial house & goes and lives with her parents. When the husband asked for decree of divorce under desertion the court refuses the petition.

Principal

iv) Renunciation of the world:

When a spouse renounces the world, he/she gives up everything and takes up Sanyasatna. Just wearing clothes or changing names, he/she will not become a sanyasi they should perform rituals required.

vi) Conversion:

When one of the spouses converts to other religion their spouse can ask for divorce.

vii) Not continuing the marriage after judicial separation:

The husband and wife decides to not continue the marriage after judicial separation they can ask for divorce.

viii) Reproach.

ix) Unsound mind

x) Venerial disease.

Extra grounds for divorce available only to wife (115, 13(B))

i) Bigamy:

If the husband marries other women even when they are still married, wife can ask for divorce under this ground.

(6) ii) Rape, bestiality:

If the husband is convicted for rape or he shows behavior of a beast and constantly abuses the wife can claim divorce.

iii) Pre-repudiation of marriage:

Here if the girl is married before 15 years she can claim for divorce.

In one of the decided case law, a wife claimed for divorce on the grounds that she was repudiated before the age of 15.

granted the decree of the divorce.

2. b.

Voidable marriages are those marriages which can be made legal or void on the circumstances or the decision of the spouse.

Types of marriages that are considered as voidable marriages:

1) Marriage with an unsound mind:

When the marriage is with of an unsound person it is left on the spouse to whether to continue the marriage or not.

Introduction:

Hindu coparceners who have interest in the co-parcenary property by birth, their interest in the coparcenary property is uncertain and undefined so long as they remain joint, because all the coparceners enjoy equally along with others. However, the unity may be broken by effecting partition among the coparceners.

Partition is an act by which coparcener severs his relations with joint family and loses his status of coparcener and becomes an independent individual from the links of joint family. An important consequence of such partition is that the share of the coparcener or coparceners seeking partition which is still partition, uncertain, fluctuating and unpredictable becomes specific and definite, as a result of partition, and thus allotted to the respective members.

Meaning of Partition:

The Mitakshara lays down: "Partition is the adjustment of the diverse interests regarding the whole, by distributing them into particular portions of the aggregate." Thus, according to Mitakshara is used in two distinct senses; firstly, the adjustment into specific shares the diverse rights of the different members

Principal

VIVEKANANDA COLLEGE OF LAW

12/1, 3rd Cross, Maruthi Extn

according to the whole of family property; Secondly, the severance of joint status, with the legal consequences resulting therefrom. Partition has been defined as "the crystallization of the fluctuating interest of a coparcenary into a specific share in the joint family estate."

The Karnataka High Court in B. Bassamma V. K.B. Sadyajathappa has held that severance of status is brought about when shares of co-parceners are crystallized by defining their share and once that is done the mere fact that they continued to stay together in the same house would not by itself make any legal impact on the severance of the same status already brought about as subsequent conduct of the parties would only pertain to the domain of mode of enjoyment of the properties.

Where there is no joint property to divide, there can be a partition by the mere declaration "I am separate from thee" for a partition and ~~reasons for~~ ~~se~~ merely indicates state of mind. Existence of property is not essential for partition, and reasons for severance are immaterial.

1. a) Divorce was unknown concept in the Hindu marriage. It was a sacrament. According to Manu the concept of divorce was not there, it was believed that the bond of husband and wife is unbreakable and it was sacred.

According to Mitakshara a husband & wife could only separate by the mutual consent not by any other means.

But after the legislation and introduction of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 many grounds were given for divorce. Those are:

1) Adultery (Section 13(1)):

Adultery means when a person has ~~the~~ sex voluntarily with other rather than his/her spouse. The spouse can claim for divorce even if it happens once.

Case:

Swapna Gore V. Sadananda Gore.

Here the wife found that the husband was coming home late and there was a change in his behavior. The court granted the decree of divorce stating sometimes it is difficult to produce accurate evidence & circumstantial evidences shall be considered.

ii) Cruelty:

Cruelty is also one of the grounds for divorce under Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. Cruelty shall be both physical or mental. The spouse may feel danger to his/her life.

Here in cruelty the mens rea of the abuser is not taken into consideration.

There are few points to consider here:

1. There should be constant abuse.
2. There should be threat to their life.
- 3.

iii) Desertion:

Desertion is when ~~the~~ one of the spouses leaves the matrimonial relationship and obligation with an intention to not continue the marriage and not live with the spouse. It is considered desertion only after a year of the spouse moving out.

In Bipin Chandra V. Prabavati,

The husband went to England because of work, meantime the wife and the friend of the husband shared letters, the father of the husband finds those letters and when asked about it the wife refuses to say anything and leaves the matrimonial house & goes and lives with her parents. When the husband asked for decree of divorce under desertion the court refuses the petition.

Principal

iv) Renunciation of the world:

When a spouse renounces the world, he/she gives up everything and takes up Sanyasatna. Just wearing clothes or changing names, he/she will not become a sanyasi they should perform rituals required.

vi) Conversion:

When one of the spouses converts to other religion their spouse can ask for divorce.

vii) Not continuing the marriage after judicial separation:

The husband and wife decides to not continue the marriage after judicial separation they can ask for divorce.

viii) Reproach.

ix) Unsound mind.

x) Venerial disease.

Extra grounds for divorce available only to wife (115, 13(B))

i) Bigamy:

If the husband marries other women even when they are still married, wife can ask for divorce under this ground.

(6) ii) Rape, bestiality:

If the husband is convicted for rape or he shows behavior of a beast and constantly abuses the wife can claim divorce.

iii) Pre-repudiation of marriage:

Here if the girl is married before 15 years she can claim for divorce.

In one of the decided case law, a wife claimed for divorce on the grounds that she was repudiated before the age of 15.

granted the decree of the divorce.

2. b.

Voidable marriages are those marriages which can be made legal or void on the circumstances or the decision of the spouse.

Types of marriages that are considered as voidable marriages:

1) Marriage with an unsound mind:

When the marriage is with of an unsound person it is left on the spouse to whether to continue the marriage or not.

Introduction:

Hindu coparceners who have interest in the co-parcenary property by birth, their interest in the coparcenary property is uncertain and undefined so long as they remain joint, because all the coparceners enjoy equally along with others. However, the unity may be broken by effecting partition among the coparceners.

Partition is an act by which coparcener severs his relations with joint family and loses his status of coparcener and becomes an independent individual from the links of joint family. An important consequence of such partition is that the share of the coparcener or coparceners seeking partition which is still partition, uncertain, fluctuating and unpredictable becomes specific and definite, as a result of partition, and thus allotted to the respective members.

Meaning of Partition:

The Mitakshara lays down: "Partition is the adjustment of the diverse interests regarding the whole, by distributing them into particular portions of the aggregate." Thus, according to Mitakshara is used in two distinct senses; firstly, the adjustment into specific shares the diverse rights of the different members

Principal

according to the whole of family property; Secondly, the severance of joint status, with the legal consequences resulting therefrom. Partition has been defined as "the crystallization of the fluctuating interest of a coparcenary into a specific share in the joint family estate."

The Karnataka High Court in B. Bassamma V. K.B. Sadyajathappa has held that severance of status is brought about when shares of co-parceners are crystallized by defining their share and once that is done the mere fact that they continued to stay together in the same house would not by itself make any legal impact on the severance of the same status already brought about as subsequent conduct of the parties would only pertain to the domain of mode of enjoyment of the properties.

Where there is no joint property to divide, there can be a partition by the mere declaration "I am separate from thee" for a partition and ~~reasons for~~ ~~se~~ merely indicates state of mind. Existence of property is not essential for partition, and reasons for severance are immaterial.
