The Faculty Development Programme, attended by 65 participants, commenced on 21/4/2022, in Virtual Mode, through Zoom App, at sharp 9 am with Welcome address by the Principal, DR K B Kempe Gowda. Sri H G Balagopal, Chairman of the Governing Council of our institution, delivered a Short Address in appreciation of the Karnataka State Law University's initiative in conducting the FDP in association with our institution. The programme was inaugurated by the Honorable Vice Chancellor, KSLU, Hubballi, Prof. (Dr.) P Ishwar Bhat, who delivered the inaugural address highlighting the significance of Faculty Development Programme.

The first session commenced at 9.30am on Indian Jurisprudence by Prof. (Dr.) P Ishwara Bhat, Honorable Vice Chancellor, KSLU, Hubballi. He delivered a highly informative lecture on 'Indian Jurisprudence' and stated that the Hindu legal system is one of the most ancient legal systems in the world. It is based on the concept of 'Dharma'. Dharma refers to the order set by nature and adherence of human beings to such natural order. Dharma includes the concept of nyaya or justice. The Hindus believed that dharma ensures that humans exist in harmony with the entire cosmos or Universe. The session ended with active interaction by the participants.

The second session was held by Prof. (Dr.) Ved Kumari, Honorable Vice Chancellor, National Law School, Odisha on the topic, 'Differences between sections 299 and 300 of Indian Penal Code, 1860.' Culpable homicide is defined under S 299 and murder under S 300 of IPC. There is a thin line of difference between these two sections. Culpable homicides is a genus and murder its species. All murders are culpable homicide but all culpable homicides are not murder. Hence there are differences in the intention of causing death under sections 299 and 300. There is a difference under the two sections in the nature of bodily injury likely to cause death. There is also a difference in the degree of knowledge, under the two sections. The session ended after interaction with the participants.

Prof. Dr. Manjith Singh Nijjar, Former Registrar & Professor of Law, Punjabi University, Patiala, Punjab

The third session was on 'Broad Concepts of Hindu Law and their challenges.' The resource person was Prof (Dr) Manjith Singh Nijjar, Former Registrar and Professor of Law, Punjabi University, Patiala, Punjab. Since Hindu society has always been a patriarchal society, property rights of male members of the family were always supreme and were considered to be more important than other family members. Efforts have been constantly made to provide for women as mothers, daughters-in-laws etc., a right to property. According to Hindu family system, the daughter becomes part of her husband's family and accordingly entitled to property from her husband or son. However in the case of an unmarried daughter, dharma shastras have clearly laid down that such daughters have the right to be maintained by her fathers and brothers. Decision concluded with participants being engaged in active interaction.

Hon'ble Justice Kumar, Former Judge, High Court of Karnataka

On 22nd April, the first session commenced at 9am on the ectopic, 'Evolution of property rights of Women Under Hindu Law'. The Resource person was Hon'ble Justice N. Kumar Former Judge, High Court of Karnataka. Hindu women have come a long way from the period of classic Hindu Law where they enjoyed limited ownership rights, to the present times, where, as per section 6 of Hindu Succession Amendment Act,2015, Women are entitled to equal co-parcenary rights, as sons. They are now entitled to claim partition and possession of ancestral and self occupied property of their father. The gender- unequal provisions are now the laws of the past.

The session concluded with lively interaction of participants with Justice N Kumar.

Prof. Dr. Dilip Ukey, Vice-Chancellor, National Law University, Maharashtra

The second session was on the topic, ' Criminal Law: Recent Trends.' The Guest Speaker was Prof (Dr) K C Sunny, Hon'ble Vice Chancellor, National University of Advanced Legal Studies, Kochi. The criminal laws are outdated, obsolete and contradictory to several human rights. With the development of technology and growing human rights activism, criminal law has to be updated as per the changing trends. The Government should empower the investigation machinery with the skills and tools required for scientific investigation. The population of under-trial prisoners who are not able to furnish bail should be reduced through efficient application of the principle of Plea Bargaining. Crimes which fulfill a financial motive, viz., money- laundering, tax evasion, insurance fraud, identity theft, counterfeiting of currency, security frauds, etc., are required to be dealt with stringent laws as they impact the society very hard. The session ended with lively interaction for about fifteen minutes. The third session was by Prof (Dr) Dilip Ukey, Hon'ble Vice Chancellor, National Law University, Maharashtra, who spoke on the ' Significance of Natural Law Theory'. The natural law is the law of reason and experience. It is universal in its precepts and its authority extends to all men. Natural law is immutable and permanent because it is based on God made essential human nature, which does not change with time or place. Natural law has played a pivotal role in legal development. It has played the role of harmonizing , synthesizing and promoting peace and justice in different periods and protected the public against injustice, tyranny and misrule. The natural law theory reflects a perpetual quest for absolute justice. The session was interesting and interactive.

Prof. Dr. V. Sudesh, Professor, University Law College, Department of Studies in Law, Bangalore University, Bengaluru.

The first session on 23/4/2022 commenced at 9am on the topic, ‘Jurisprudential Perspectives on Social Justice as Purpose of Law.’ The Resource person was Prof. (Dr.) V. Sudesh, University Law College and Department of studies in Law, Bangalore University, Bengaluru. All citizens must have access to justice. If people cannot defend their rights, property or livelihoods against unscrupulous individuals and individuals, they risk losing trust in the whole system of governance. Such a situation is unacceptable and unsustainable to achieve Justice, Peace and Stability, which are the Function and Purpose of Law. Hence, the establishment of robust, accessible judicial institutions can spell the difference between vulnerability and security, desperation and dignity, oppression and empowerment for all the people. Strengthening the rule of law is an essential ingredient to enhance economic and social progress.

Prof. Dr. Somu C. S, Christ University, Bengaluru.

The second session was by Prof. (Dr.) Somu C. S, Christ University, Bengaluru. He addressed on 'Illicit Enrichment: Dynamics between Corruption and Human Rights.' Corruption is a major threat to the world. Corrupt practices such as bribery and other abuses of public functions for private gain have been criminalized in almost all legal systems. There is a direct link between fighting corruption and the protection and promotion of human rights. Corruption undermines the effectiveness and efficiency of public institutions and erodes public trust in government. Therefore, it is important to take measures such as criminalizing and prosecuting illicit enrichment as it is one of the simplest tools for holding corrupt public officials accountable. Asset recovery is a core constituent of international as well as regional anti corrupt instruments. Asset declaration by public officials and government employees is considered as one of the preventive mechanisms needed to control corruption. Different countries deal in different ways in prosecution and confiscation of proceeds of crimes. Some scholars argue that illicit enrichment raises concerns regarding fundamental principles of law and human rights, particularly regarding the burden of proof, the presumption of innocence and the privilege against self incrimination, experience and jurisprudence have shown that not all rights are absolute. These fundamental principles are often qualified in the application of the law to serve the interests of both the public and justice. Thus, criminalizing illicit enrichment does not contradict the long established tradition of presumption of innocence and other Constitutional Rights granted to the accused persons.

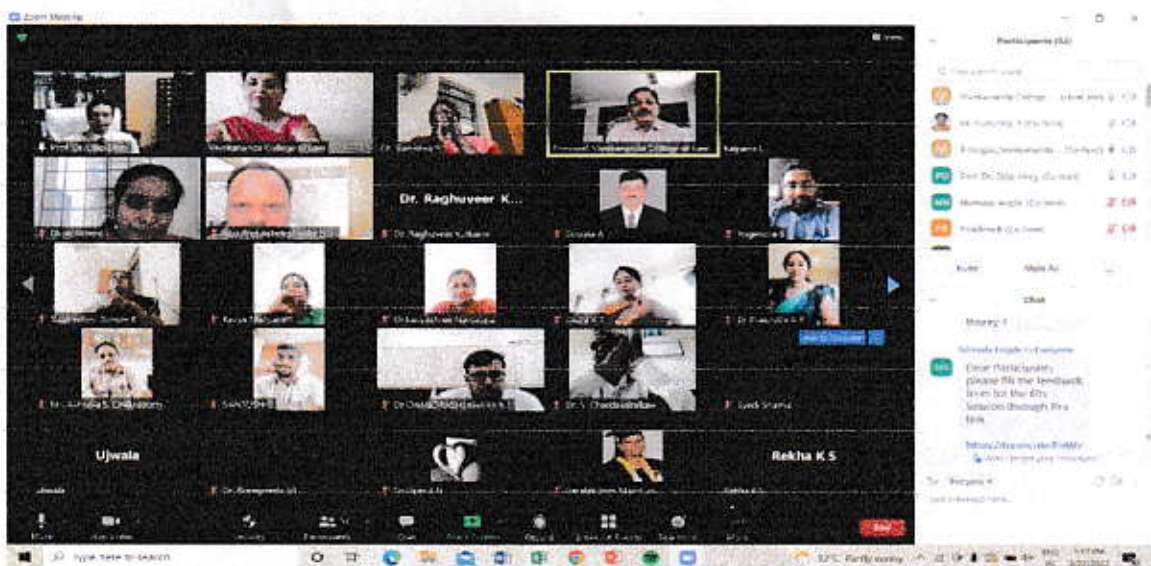

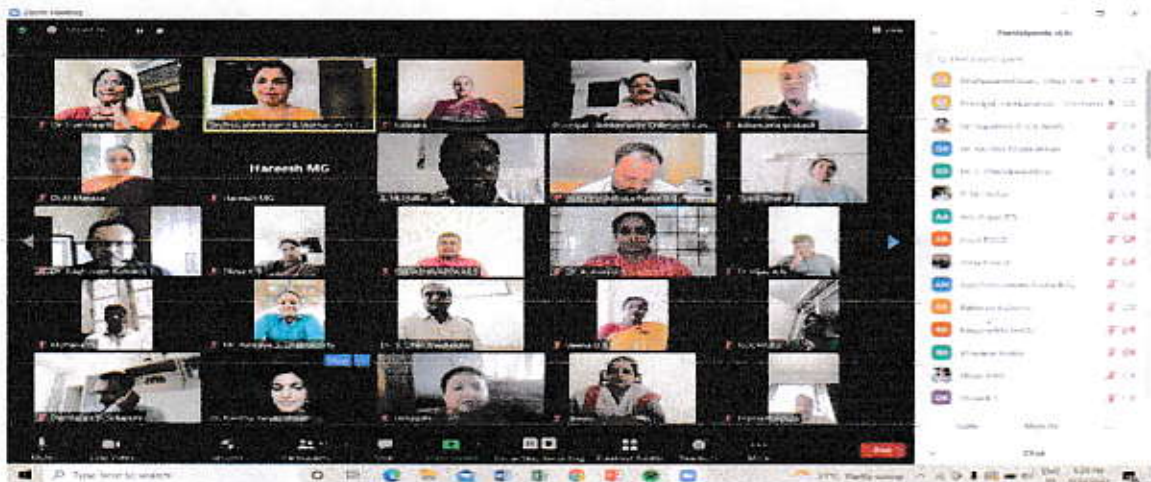

Dr. P. Puneeth, Associate Professor, Jawaharlal Nehru University, Delhi.

The last session was by Dr. P. Puneeth, Associate Professor, Jawaharlal Nehru University, Delhi. He spoke on the topic 'Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 : Looking through the Constitutional Lens.' Analysis of the concept of Restitution of Conjugal Rights, a matrimonial remedy available under section 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 reveals that, the aggrieved party can knock the doors of the court to enforce this right . Restitution of Conjugal Rights amounts to coercive action by the state, violating once sexual and decisional autonomy thereby infringing right to privacy and human dignity under article 21 of the Constitution of India. The Constitutional validity of section 9 of HMA, 1955 is highly debatable and controversial. Some people believe that it serves a social purpose in preventing the breaking up of wedding ties, while others believe that it snatches away the privacy of the wife affecting her dignity by forcible cohabitation, much against her will. When there is irretrievable breakdown of marriage, it is very difficult to unite them. Thus section 9 of HMA should be declared as unconstitutional, since it will be a double whammy for the woman because she is already out of her parents' home soon after marriage and the remedy of Restitution of Conjugal Rights forcing her to cohabit with her husband unwillingly. The session ended with lively interaction.

Report on Faculty Development Program:

On 27.08.2018, One Day Faculty Development Program was organised jointly with the Karnataka State Law University, Hubballi on the newly introduced subject: Legal Methods, for I semester of B.A LL.B & B.Com LL.B students.

Prof. Dr. C. S. Patil, Dean, KSLU Law School, Hubballi, imparting training on the Research Methods.

The Resource Persons were:

Technical Session I- Prof. Dr. P. Ishwar Bhat, Hon'ble Vice-Chancellor, KSLU, Hubballi, oriented the course teachers across the state on Course Materials & Teaching Methods.

Technical Session II- Prof. Dr. C S Patil, Dean, KSLU Law School, Hubballi, imparted training on the Research Methods to be followed. A Total of 84 course teachers from various Law Colleges across State benefited from the Programme.

Faculty Development Programme on Legal Methods in the Academic year 2018-19 the course on Research Methodology was replaced with a newly introduced course, Legal Methods, for the first semester of 5 year LLB programs. Prof (Dr) Ishwara Bhat, Honorable Vice Chancellor inaugurated the programme. He was also the resource person for the first technical session on the course materials and teaching methods to be adopted. The goal of introducing this course was to familiarize the students on the various intellectual methods employed by lawyers. The course fulfills three important goals. The first is to ensure that the basics of research in writing are understood. The second is to reason out the decision taken.

Principal

VIVEKANANDA COLLEGE OF LAW
12/1, 3rd Cross, Maruthi Extn
Gayathri Nagar, Bengaluru-560 021

The Third is ability to reflect law in the light of a larger, social and political environment. The course is highly useful to understand the functions of law, the nature of law, classification of law and sources of law. It also provides knowledge to source authoritative materials in understanding law. The types of authoritative materials are Legislation, Precedent and other secondary sources. The order of authorities is the Constitution, Status, precedents and other secondary sources. The various ways of citation of laws were taught. The methods of making case notes i.e., short summary of the judgment through judicious reading and identifying the Ratio Decidendi and the Obiter Dicta were made known.

The next focus was on Legal Writing, an effective communication through clarity, accuracy and precision in expression, mainly legal terms and maxims. The meaning of the legal matter requires a proper grasp of the subject Interpretation of Statutes. Initially the basic rules of interpretation namely the Golden Rule and the Mischief Rule are to be applied to understand the intention of the law maker in making the law. Thrust was also laid on the Alternate Dispute Resolution Systems to avoid the long and arduous process of Judicial Settlement.

After a sumptuous lunch, Dr. C. S. Patil, Dean, Faculty of Law, KSLU, Hubballi, held the next session on the Research Methods. He brought out the significance of the General Clauses Act, 1847. It is also called the legislative dictionary due to its utility by providing definition to standard terms of legal and other related expressions. The next focus was on Judicial Methods, the Principles governing the judges evolved by the Indian Judiciary, viz., Principles of Impartiality, Judicial Restraint, Reasoned Decision, etc. The objective factor in research in general is the requirement to identify, establish and promote 'truth'. Legal research is societal based and involves consideration of various factors. The students are to be trained to learn research at the fundamental level.

Legal Research involves systematic study of verifiable data to establish not only the scientific truth, but also the philosophical truth in pursuit of justice. Research throws open the avenue of learning by involvement. It fosters the ability to adapt analytical skills and reasoning. Legal research is a quest for truth, scholarship, knowledge and societal benefit in terms of solutions for legal problems. Research can either be Doctrinal (non-empirical) and Non-doctrinal (empirical). The techniques of collecting data include Interview, Questionnaire, Sampling and Surveys. Data collection may be from primary and secondary sources. It is imperative for the researcher to get induced to information by communication technology (ICT).

The utmost Quality to be imbibed by a good researcher is representation of truth and not its suppression. The affinity and involvement of the researcher must be perennial, since

Research is always a concept in continuum. Topics selected for research must reflect social values. The life of law and its research must be for the betterment of humans, of contemporary relevance and create career opportunities wherever possible.

Report on Faculty Development Programme

As an IQAC initiative every year (Except in Covid-19 pandemic) institution organised Faculty Development Program to impart quality education to students. On 13.12.2017 for the benefit of the faculty members of law colleges across Karnataka, Faculty Development Program on “Teaching Skills” was organised in our college. It was inaugurated by, Prof. H K Nagaraja, NLSIU. Around 70 law teachers from across the State participated in the programme.

Welcome address by the Principal Dr. K. B. Kempe Gowda, VCL

The Faculty Development Programme was held on 13/12/2017 and was open for teachers from all law colleges in Karnataka. The FDP commenced with a warm welcome by the Principal Dr. K. B. Kempe Gowda. The inaugural session was held by Adjunct Prof. (Dr.) H. K. Nagaraja of National Law School of India University, Bengaluru.

He educated us on ‘The Tools for effective Law teaching’. Teaching is effective in the light of bringing real things and authentic daily life situations into the classroom. There are better ways to learn than by “telling”. It is to make students think that becomes important. Students should be encouraged to ask questions and discuss about them. The depth of learning is enhanced when students are engaged in the process. Effective tools in law teaching may include understanding the provision of law, reasoning and relating to it. The lecture method may be supplemented with the case study method for understanding the complexities of law, development and emerging trends. The case method helps students to solve problems by applying legal knowledge, principles, ideas and skills. The seminar method enables organization of the class to use a scientific approach to analyze problems.

Prof. V. S. Mallar, NSLIU, training the teachers on “Planning & Preparation for teaching subjects of Law.”

The next technical session on ‘Planning and Preparation for teaching subjects of Law’ was conducted by Professor Mallar, Former Registrar NLSIU. Mere theoretical study of law does not suffice and therefore Moot Court competitions, Client Counseling Sessions and practical experience through internships are the need of the day. These sessions enable students to act as counsels for both sides, analyze evidence, thrash out legal issues, argue against each other to prove their point before the judge, who will render judgment based on their legal understanding and analytical skills.

Prof. M. K. Ramesh, NSLIU, delivered a lecture on “Basic Teaching Methods”.

After a brief tea break the third technical session was conducted by Prof. (Dr). M K Ramesh, Professor of Law, NLSIU, Bengaluru. He briefed on basic teaching methods. Legal education is complicated and multidisciplinary study. One of the traditional methods of imparting legal education is the lecture method. Lectures are used for the introduction of the subject, summarizing ideas and bringing out the relationship between theory and practice. Case methods supplement learning through analysis and judgment and identification of the Ratio Decidendi and Obiter Dicta. The problem solving methods are Moot Court and related competitions help students to gain knowledge by working out solutions for problems. Discussion method showcases the skills of legal investigation, synthesis, analysis and successful outcomes. Simulation methods are role play methods enabling students to negotiate and strike deals. Debating methods will enable students in issue handling. Clinical methods focus on the functional aspects and expose students to drafting and conveyancing skills along with the standard of service.

Prof. Sairam Bhat, NSLIU, spoke on “Research & Teaching”.

After sumptuous lunch the last session on ‘Research and teaching’ was held by Prof. Sairam Bhat, Professor of Law, NLSI, Bengaluru. He brought out the significance of good teaching through creation of knowledge through active research. It imparts the value of enquiry-based learning. It promotes curiosity based learning processes in classrooms. Teaching and research are mutually reinforcing. A well informed teacher can create a well equipped student, ready to face the world.
