Best Practice-1

Faculty Development Programme

The context:

FDPs help in the forging of better relationships between teachers and pupils. They create a supporting learning environment leading to increased student satisfaction and instilling in them values based study. The FDP is an initiative to build confidence, network character and professional development. They provide opportunities for skill building and widening horizons.

FDPs enable the faculty to understand the subjects in both local as well as global contexts. It is often a blend of lectures, workshops, group activities, mentoring and self-directed learning.

Evidence of Success:

FDP provides institutional support through clear cut policies, encouragement from leadership and alignment with the institution's vision, mission and core objectives in achieving the desired outcome of continuous learning by both the faculty and students leading to increased student motivation, satisfaction and academic performance.

Problems Encountered:

The problems encountered in FDPs are many and complex due to the changing educational needs and expectations. Financial constraints and time pressure are problems faced. The other challenges include performance anxiety, competitive environment, diverse backgrounds and academic stress.

Impact:

FDP's benefits teachers and students immensely and this can lead to better student engagement learning outcomes and retention rates.

Best Practices -2

Institution endorses the motto of a 'sound body in a sound mind'. The Red Cross Unit of the institution conducts health check-up camps in the college, not only for the benefits of the staff and students but also of the members of the neighbourhood. The advantages of these health camps are that they help to identify health problem early and before they become severe and rendering advice on the treatment to be administered. A host of Doctors and Specialists are made available for consultation in the college premises during these camps. The aim of these camps is to create awareness among the staff, students and general public.

Evidence of Success:

It is immensely satisfying to state that this campus has contributed significantly to prevention of illness, reducing the burden of healthcare system and improving overall community health.

Problems Encountered & Resources Required:

A significant problem encountered is with regard to the FREE MEDICAL CAMP made accessible to all the concerned.

Impacts:

The staff and students have benefited positively due to the supervised environment providing by these Medical Camps facilitated by experts' doctors and specialists. These camps nurture emotional well being and increases overall happiness to academic success.
